About Bob Hensgens

"Louisiana, like most other states, and other governmental entities, is struggling today; struggling to pay the bills for promises that should have never been made,” stated Bob Hensgens. Hensgens is convinced that government can and must live within its means. “I believe our government does not have an income problem, our government has a spending problem,” said

Hensgens. "The State should not be building lakes and golf courses when our roads are deteriorating and our schools struggle for resources. Government needs to focus on the things it is legislated to do and do them efficiently," Hensgens stated.

Hensgens said, "It has been an incredible honor to serve as an elected official. I am asking for the support of the people of District 47. My fiscally conservative and family values best represent the values of this district. I am a pro-life, pro-guns rights candidate," concluded Hensgens.

Bob Hensgens' roots run deep in Vermillion and Cameron Parishes. As a second grader he drove the tractor on the farm his family still runs. Bob graduated from Vermilion Catholic and stepped away from his education at LSU to help the family when his father was killed in a farm accident.

With a degree from USL in Business Administration, Bob built his own successful health care management business providing essential high-quality care for our treasured elderly population.

As Mayor of Gueydan, Bob Hensgens has balanced the city budget, created a surplus and brought new equipment, training and technology to the Police and Fire Departments -- without raising taxes. Bob Hensgens eliminated waste, cut expenses and even slashed his own salary as Mayor to fund pay raises for the Police Department.

Bob and his wife Nancy enjoy spending time with their two granddaughters and are active members of St. Peter the Apostle Church in Gueydan.
